

PLECS

DEMO MODEL

Multiphase Synchronous Buck Converter

Last updated in PLECS 4.3.1

www.plexim.com

- ▶ Request a PLECS trial license
- ▶ Check the PLECS documentation

1 Overview

This demo model, as seen in Fig. 1, shows a configurable multiphase synchronous buck converter with a load step.

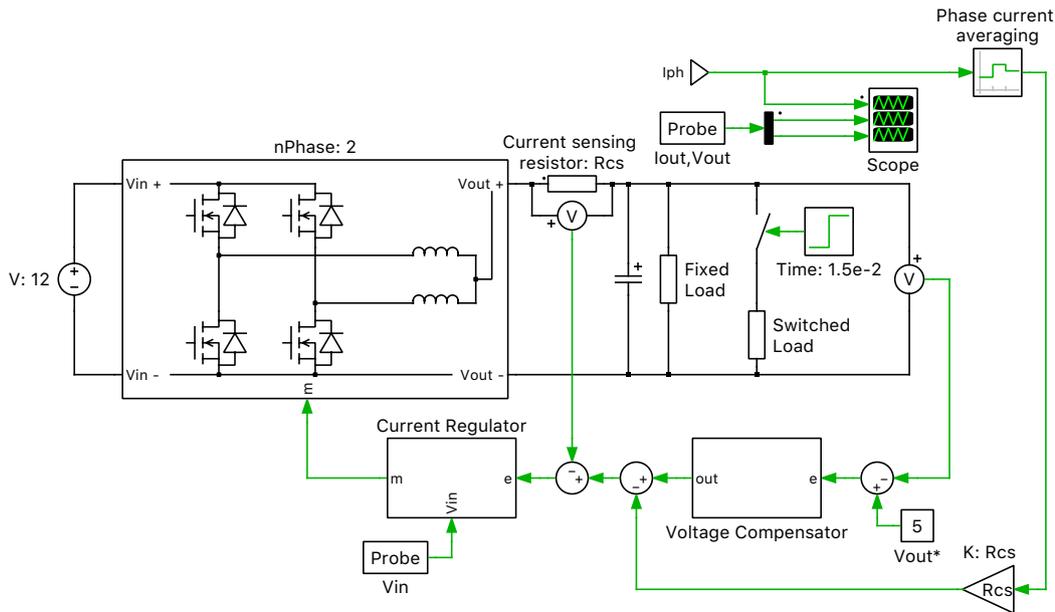

Figure 1: Multiphase synchronous buck converter

Note This model contains model initialization commands that are accessible from:

PLECS Standalone: The menu Simulation + Simulation Parameters... + Initializations

PLECS Blockset: Right click in the Simulink model window + Model Properties + Callbacks + InitFcn

2 Model

2.1 Power Circuit

A description of the synchronous buck converter topology is given in the demo model “Synchronous Buck Converter” in the PLECS demo models library. In this model, a 12 V input is stepped down to 5 V at the output. Initially, there is a $2.5\ \Omega$ resistive load present, but then a parallel $2.5\ \Omega$ load is switched in, effectively halving the load resistance. The switching cell can be paralleled in multiple phases, which is a common technique to reduce the stress on the devices and ripple currents.

This model features the Wire Selector component and a dynamic subsystem mask to implement and appropriately display a user-specified number of buck converter phases. The number of phases may be varied within the subsystem mask to automatically create an equivalent number of parallel connections of blocks contained between the input and output Wire Selector components. Fig. 2 shows an example image of the effective switching cell topology when 3 phases are specified.

The dynamic mask feature is new in PLECS 4.2 and varies the icon depending on the specified number of phases. Within the switching cell subsystem’s mask, drawing functions are implemented in the Lua language to display an icon showing an appropriate number of half bridges. Additionally, the modulator uses phase shift logic to properly account for the number of phases selected by the user.

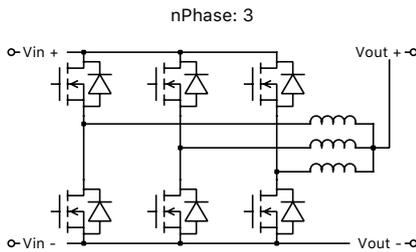

Figure 2: Switching cell

2.2 Controls

The switch modulation is generated by comparing the modulation index, provided via feedback control, with the output of a Triangular Wave Generator block. The output voltage is measured and compared with a 5 VDC set point. Nested voltage and current PI control loops are used to determine the duty cycle of the FETs. For the current feedback, a voltage measurement is made across a current sensing resistor rather than an ideal ammeter block to account for its associated impedance. The control signal is scaled by a factor of this resistance to effectively convert the voltage measurement into amperes. The gain parameters of the controller are adjusted automatically depending on the switching frequency, output capacitance and resistance. The duty cycle range is limited between 1% and 99%, and logic is included to prevent windup of the integrator. The two switches in each phase are then modulated in a complementary manner. In practice, it is important not to gate both switches on at the same time to avoid shoot-through. This is prevented by introducing a dead time to delay the turn-on of the opposing switches. Also, the individual phase currents are averaged over one period and subtracted from the current set point in an effort to reduce the inductor current offset and achieve balancing across the phase inductors.

3 Simulation

Run the simulation with the model as provided to view the output signals and individual inductor currents. The simulation includes the start-up of the converter as well as a load step demonstrating the controller response. Try comparing a few simulations with an increasing number of phases - you should be able to observe reduced individual phase current averages and ripple magnitudes, resulting in reduced strain on the individual switches.

Revision History:

PLECS 4.3.1 First release

How to Contact Plexim:

☎	+41 44 533 51 00	Phone
	+41 44 533 51 01	Fax
✉	Plexim GmbH Technoparkstrasse 1 8005 Zurich Switzerland	Mail
@	info@plexim.com	Email
	http://www.plexim.com	Web

PLECS Demo Model

© 2002–2021 by Plexim GmbH

The software PLECS described in this document is furnished under a license agreement. The software may be used or copied only under the terms of the license agreement. No part of this manual may be photocopied or reproduced in any form without prior written consent from Plexim GmbH.

PLECS is a registered trademark of Plexim GmbH. MATLAB, Simulink and Simulink Coder are registered trademarks of The MathWorks, Inc. Other product or brand names are trademarks or registered trademarks of their respective holders.